Once past the town with its scorn and

suath,
Its turmoll only a memory,
In fellowship with the bird and tree,
I feel the lure of the August path.

Oh, fresh, free charm of the August

days
That wins and saves from the monerer strife,
I greet the surge of a larger life
Along the slopes of thy noiseless ways.

ONE BY ONE.

By MISS PROCTOR.

The following poem is thereughly characteristic of Adelaide Procter (born in England, 1825, died 1881), for, although a poet, Miss Procter was not an habitual dreamer by any means, but was a woman of great activity throughout her all too brief, career, her energies lawing been devoted to visiting the sick teaching the ignorant and ministering for "their of human needs wherever opportunity offered. And her death, as decayed, worthy of so choice a spirit, For 15 months she is said to have been unable as the best of the sick teaching the complete of the sick of the s

One by one the moments fall; Some are coming, some are going Do not strive to catch them all.

One by one thy duties wait thee, Let thy whole strength go to each; Let no future dreams clate thee, Learn thou first what these can teach.

One by one (bright gifts from heaven) Joys are sent thee here below; Take them readily when given, Ready, too, to let them go.

One by one thy griefs shall meet thee: Do not fear an arm-ed band; One will fade as others greet thee; Shadows passing through the land.

Do not look at life's long sorrow; See how small each moment's pain; God will help thee for tomorrow, So each day begins again.

Every hour that fleets so slowly Has its task to do or bear; Luminous the crown, and holy, When each gem is set with care.

Hours are golden links, God's token, Reaching heaven; but one by one Take them, lest the chain be broken Ere the pilgrimage be done.

Miss Rena Strauss has just returned from a delightful trip to Ocean View, where she has been spending a month.

The Charlottesville Progress of Monday says:
The latest bust received at the Virginia building at St. Louis from the University of Virginia is that in marble of Professor John B. Minor, the most distinguished man who has ever been at the head of the University law school, ruled by numerous distinguished jurists. This bust is the work of Virginia's greatest living sculptor, Edward Valentine.

The first entertainment given in the Virginia State building was a violin recital. This was quite appropriate because of the love Jefferson always had for the violin. It is said that in days of old the halls and rooms of Monticello, Jefferson's home, resounded with the pote of the violin. So it was in the redica of Monticello, at the fair, during the recital of Miss Amy Jeffress, of Edwardsville, III.
